Melting the Ice (Play by Play, #7) by Jaci Burton

Ice World is a sensory activity for toddlers and pre-school children that involves playing with ice, water and sea theme props. Older children will still have a lot of fun and benefit from playing with this sensory ice tub. The amazing thing about sensory play is that it opens the door to so many wonderful learning opportunities such as imaginative play, language exploration, fine motor development for pre-writing skills, coordination, social interactions and so much more.

The cubes of ice had air in between them, and the air was taking up space in the jar. Ice is a solid, and solids don ' t take the shape of the container. So even though the jar was full of ice, it wasn ' t completely full. Ice takes up more space than the same amount of water. The molecules in ice (a solid) are arranged neatly in a regular pattern.

Ice is melting across the globe at a faster rate than

Melting ice sheets have raised the global sea level by 1.8cm since the 1990s, matching 'worst-case' predictions, say scientists. Researchers from the University of Leeds in the UK, together with Melting the Ice is the latest in Jaci Burtons Play by Play series, one of my favourite series. I had counted down for this release, couldn ' t wait for Drew and Carolina ' s story. And oh god it was fantastic!!! I am a sucker for brothers best friend/best friends sister stories. And this just ticked all the boxes!! I loved it.
