Melissa Stewart - No Monkeys, No Chocolate

“No Monkeys, No Chocolate by Melissa Stewart and Allen Young with illustrations by Nicole Wong is a work of nonfiction rising above other titles for its authenticity in text and pictures. Even after several readings I found myself actively engaged each time, looking for added items in the visuals and marveling at the knowledge I was gleaning from the writing.

My mentor text this week is called No Monkeys, No Chocolate by Melissa Stewart and Allen Young. This reading book explores the relationship between the trees and the animals (and other living things) in the rainforest habitat. It points out just how important it is that they help one another and the roles they play.

No Monkeys No Chocolate

No Monkeys, No Chocolate Written by Melissa Stewart and Allen Young and Illustrated by Nicole Wong This book traces how chocolate gets from the tropical rainforest and into our stomachs. You may be surprised at some of the players and how each has an important role in the process.

No Monkeys, No Chocolate: Stewart, Melissa, Young, Allen

With No Monkeys, No Chocolate, she has shed new light on the cultivation of cocoa trees in the world's diminishing rain forests. She worked with Allen Young, "the world's leading expert on cocoa tree pollination and growth" to create a colorful picture book with solid information provided in an accessible way yet leavened with humor provided by some "bookworm commentators" who have fun with word play.
