The Old Love and the New

Being a father at age 46 was a traumatic experience. Up until that time my life was all about me and everything else was just secondary. I learned very fast that my son, Jonathan, was now my #1 priority. The one constant to any parent is their child will view them as 'old'. It's a reoccurring theme throughout this book. The twist in this book is that I'm writing it as my son. Much of Jonathan's story is true only in as far as what we've said to each other. All parents have their own peculiarities. Mine is that I like making up a lot of stuff. It's a trait Jonathan has inherited from me and keeps the world entertained. Hopefully you will find this book funny and fun to read. I have a twisted sense of reality that with the talent of my illustrator is on display for all to see. My son's journey starts at his birth and will be told in his voice by me as he is too busy doing what he does best in lifenothing.
